Speaker:

Bob McInturff, of McInturff Associates, spoke about the expectations of the Supply Chain Management job market. Bob explained that it is sometimes hard to sum up your career in just two words (ie Sourcing Specialist, Purchasing Manager) and that titles do not reveal the whole picture. He stated that you need to sell your hard skills as well as your soft skills and be ready to acquire new skills along the way. Bob then went over a list of Supply Chain skill sets from actual job postings including: strong statistic and data analysis skills, strong Excel and database management skills, and willingness to travel domestically and/or internationally. He highlighted the importance of team/cross-functional relationships and communicating effectively with suppliers, customers, and partners. Bob mentioned that you will be screened for your education, experience, job title, etc. but you will be hired for your accomplishments and fit. He explained how to go about advancing your Supply Chain career and how it's all about networking. You should ask yourself questions such as: What do I know? Why hire me and why now? Bob thanked members for letting him speak and provided them with some websites with information on Supply Chain certifications.

President Mary Delaney thanked Bob McInturff for presenting.

Lunch was served at 12:00pm and the meeting was adjourned at 2:15pm.

Respectfully submitted,

Bill Pappas
Co-Secretary
